Instructional Design Challenges Not so much practice, but the flower question was interesting. I'd like to see where you go with this. I wonder was the audio problem a result of the difficulties you were having? That is, I kept getting two tracks at once if I went back to review something. The instruction did go a bit fast but that might have been because of the program glitches	eLearning Challenges A few parts went a little fast I would have enjoyed backwards navigation When I clicked on the rule reminder, the audio kept going on the other track. The navigation didn't work perfectly, so I'm not sure I got to see everything. For example, when I hit the rule reminder button, it took me back to Italy, even though it was talking about the flowers. It was the second time through that I saw the flowers. The white text on the vivid green background was difficult for me to read.

	The narration didn't seem to stop for the one quick check about the rule, which confused me. Some of the audio did not match up with the video

Other: I think the audio really enhanced the experience. Good choice, I wish I had done that with mine!
